No. 775.

A Character of her late MAJESTY.

WHEN Persons eminently distinguished, not only by their Birth, Fortune, Education, and highest Dignities; but by great, natural, and acquired Abilities, extensive Knowledge, and all the Virtues of private and publick Life, have paid the last Debt of Nature, and retired into the Sanctuary of all Mortals; it is, methinks, a Duty we owe the Publick, to pay Homage to their Characters, and represent them in such a Light as may be useful and beneficial.

We shall not enlarge upon the illustrious Birth, Fortune, or high Dignity which her late Majesty was distinguished by; for, those were not her own; and might have fallen to the Lot of the Weak and the Wicked, as well as the most Knowing and Best Princes: We shall insist, therefore, only upon those Qualities which were truly her own; which were obtained by much Study and great Assiduity, in the latter Part of her Life; and which shone forth with much Lustre in her riper Years.

THIS Princess had, very early, a warm Passion for Learning, and a strong Thirst after Knowledge; to satisfy which, she read the best Authors; conversed with the greatest Men in all Arts and Sciences, and took to great a Pleasure in their Conversation, that it may be truly said, it was her peculiar and favourite Delight. Dr. Clarke, whose Sincerity was as unquestion'd as his Judgment, gives the following Testimony of her Abilities and Virtues, in his Dedication of the Letters which passed thro' her Hands, between him and Mr. Leibnitz. "Tis with the highest Pleasure and Satisfaction, that the following Papers, upon so important a Subject as the Foundations of Natural Religion, are laid before a Princess, who, to an inimitable Sweetness of Temper, Candour, and Affability towards all, has joined, not only an impartial Love of Truth, and a Desire of promoting Learning in general; but has herself also attained to a degree of Knowledge very Particular and Uncommon, even in Matters of the nicest and most abstruse Speculation; and whose sacred Regard to the Interest of sincere and uncorrupt Religion, made her the Delight of all good Protestants abroad; and, by a just Fame, filled the Hearts of all true Britons at Home, with an Expectation before hand, which, great as it was, is fully answered by what they now sit, and are blest with."

AGAIN. "The late Learned Mr. Leibnitz well understood how great an Honour and Reputation it would be to him, to have his Arguments approved of by a Person of your Royal Highness's Character; but the same steady Impartiality, and unalterable Love of Truth; the same constant Readiness to hear, and to submit to Reason, always so conspicuous, always shining forth so brightly in your Royal Highness's Conduct, which justly made him desirous to exert, in these Papers, his utmost Skill in defending his Opinions, was an equal Encouragement to such as thought him in an Error, to endeavour to prove, that his Opinions could not be defended."

Thus far Dr. Clarke. I could produce other undoubted Testimonies of her Majesty's extraordinary Abilities and Virtues; particularly, that of a Gentleman of the strictest Probity and Honour, who died lately at Hampstead; who was often admitted into the Royal Presence, and for whom her Majesty had a great Value. This Gentleman assured me, that he had discoursed with the Queen upon Variety of Subjects, as Divinity, Morality, Ecclesiastical Affairs, Trade, City Business, and other Things within the compass of his Knowledge, in all which she manifested a clear Understanding, and penetrating Judgment, which appeared by the Questions put, the Replies made, and the many excellent Things said, which could not be premeditated, because they arose solely from the Occasions.

BUT, what need we mention particular Authorities for the Truth of that which every Person knew, who had the Felicity and Honour of her Majesty's Acquaintance: To a large Compass of Knowledge, some very uncommon, and which shew'd great Reach of Thought, she joined the most polite Address, and the most easy and elegant Manner of producing the Sentiments of others, or conveying her own; she not only studied Books, but, what was infinitely better, the Nature and Reason of Things: She drew her Knowledge out of that Fountain, from whence all real Knowledge in Books was originally drawn; and was as great a Proficient in the Science, or Wisdom of Life, both private and publick, as ever adorned any Age or Country: She could wisely manage her own Passions, and rightly conduct those of others: She was acquainted with all the Avenues of the Mind; and knew, perfectly well, how to reach the Heart, by a proper Application to the Heart. She was, indeed, formed for public Life; and, if we may be allowed to guess, what Persons would be in one Set of Circumstances, by what they act in another, we may venture to affirm, That had Caroline reigned instead of Elizabeth, she would have shewn all her Wisdom without her Foibles; and all the true Spirit of her Government without the Tyranny of it; for she understood the true Foundations of Religion, and Government: She knew, that the true Foundation of Religion was the Will of God, ever manifest in the Reason of things; and that the true Foundation of Government was Law, made by the Representatives of a free People. She distinguished between real and political Religion; real, or what Dr. Clarke calls sincere and uncorrupt Religion, had always her supreme Regard, and to which every thing was made to submit: But the political Part of Religion she considered only as local, or occasional, and so far submitted or accommodated her conduct to it, as that Conduct tended more directly to promote the Peace, Order, and Happiness of the Publick.

THUS was her Majesty greatly formed, by Nature and Study, for public Life. In private Life, she was an illustrious Example of all the social Virtues; but, in one instance, commanded the Imitation of every Family in the Kingdom; and that was prudent Family-Government. Authority, which is lost in almost every other House, was carefully preserved in the Royal Palace; where 'twas rightly judged, that Education, without Government and Restraint, as Planting, without pruning and lopping off luxuriant Branches, would produce Minds void of Strength and Beauty, and unable to bring forth the Fruits of useful and reasonable Action. The Queen knew, how absolutely necessary it was to teach Youth, very early, to refuse whatever was hurtful or dishonourable; and to prefer the constant and durable Good before momentary and fleeting Pleasures: She knew, that in the Practice of this Doctrine of Refusing, lay all the Seeds of Virtue, and the Foundation of every thing Great and truly Noble; for which Reason, she obliged her Children to refuse whatever was unreasonably desired; and, in this, hath set an Example, which, 'tis greatly to be wished, all the Families in the Kingdom would think it their highest Duty to follow; and not only in this, but in all her other domestick and private Virtues: For she was an excellent Wife, Mother, Friend, Patron, and Benefactress; so that her Name and Reputation will be dear to every Englishman, and had in everlasting Remembrance, when all the malicious Invektives of her Enemies, that is, the Enemies of the Royal Family and the Nation, will be buried in eternal Oblivion.

The only short and infallible Cure

For that reigning Disease the SCURVY, and all Scorbucick Humors, tho' arrived to the highest and most inveterate Degree, or of ever so many Years standing, and that without any sensible Emission of the least Purgings, which by an unaccountable Mixture is generally advised, although always found rather to increase and confirm the Scurvy than cure it.

By the so much famed and most pleasant Chymical DROPS:

WHICH, without the least Trouble,

Confinement, or any Disorder whatever, do at once bring to the true Cause of the Scurvy, and entirely destroy it, and all Scorbucick Humors and Effects, Root and Branch, so as never to return again, as many Thousands of both Sexes have experienced, and as all who take them in 3 Days time will be convinced; for they almost instantly alter the morbid State of the Juices, purify the Blood, sweeten all the Fluids, cleanse them from Impurities, and directly clear the whole Habit from all Spots, Blisters, black and blue Marks, Itchings, foul Eruptions, or Breakings out, Wounds of the Limbs, languid Heaviness of the whole Body, wandering Pains, Weakness of the Back, and all the vast Variety of Symptoms by which the Scurvy imitates and often lies concealed under the Appearance of the Rheumatism, and many other Disorders.

And for strengthening the Stomach, immediately creating a good Appetite, causing a regular and easy Digestion of Food, and curing all windy Effects and Disorders of the first Passages (whence proceed Head-achs, Vapours and other Indispositions) no Bitters run any other Medicine upon Earth can compare with them, inasmuch that besides infallibly curing the Scurvy in all its Shapes and Appearances, they also effectually and immediately cure the Green-Sickness in Virgins, Worms of all Kinds in young or old, and almost all other Chronic Diseases, (which are chiefly occasioned by Indigestion and stultic Crudities in the Stomach and Bowels) and certainly prevent Fevers, Agues, and other acute Illnesses.

They are wonderfully Cordial and Restorative, strengthen and enliven the whole Machine, and as soon as taken, make the Patient pleasantly Lightheaded, brisk and Vigorous to adulation, and are good for all Sorts of Persons, to preserve as well as to procure a sound and healthy State of Body.

But the great Reputation these famous Elix'd and pleasant Chymical Drops have to universality gain'd among Persons of Eminence, for their suddenly and infallibly curing the Scurvy and all Scorbucick tick Humors, and other Chronic Diseases, in such an easy and agreeable Manner, have occasioned many to mistake them, some under the same, and others under other Names: Be careful therefore not to be deceiv'd; but be sure to have the Right, which by the Author's special Appointment, are to be had only at a Geodewoman's, at the Two Blue Posts, in Haydon-Yard, in the Middles, at 3 s. 6 d. a Bottle, with Directions.
